

Cat Confessions

By Allia Zobel Nolan (Harvest House Publishers, 2010)

The last book review I did was of a business book and I started this one the same way. I dipped into this book, in the middle, just to check the tone of the book.

That is when I started laughing and also when I stopped what I was doing and started the book from the beginning. This little gem kept me laughing out loud while mentioning to my cats that they had been caught. There is not a cat lover alive who will not have the same reaction.

I won't give anything away, but I will tell you that when you thought you could blame something on your cat, you were right. The photographs that are with the confessions are just perfect, showing the unique look that only cats portray.

I love the pedigreed cats finally confessing, as my house is filled with pedigreed cats and people do not realize that they are just as evil as random bred cats. My random bred cat can attest to that.

This is a book to pick up. You will read it over and over again. It is a book to enjoy, to share and to read to your cats. Maybe it will get them to confess.

I know you can find it recommended on my homepage and I look forward to reading more of Allia's books. She has written more than 170 titles!

This book is available from Harvest House Publishers (www.HarvestHousePublishers.com). Allia has a web site at www.AlliaWrites.com where she has many exciting things about herself and her books as well as a blog. I had fun checking it out. My cats took a nap.

Carolyn M. Vella, <http://www.breedingpedigreedcats.com/>